

Chillin' and Grillin'

Young Jewish professionals got their fix of barbecue food and trimmings as Washington Hebrew Congregation's 2239 group held its Chillin' and Grillin' event.

Upwards of 200 turned up in the backyard and atrium for a late afternoon of schmoozing, eating and drinking.

Photos by Jay Perry

Billy Kinberg of D.C., a member of 2239's steering committee (the number signifying the 22-39 "young professionals" ages), serves hamburgers and veggie burgers from the grill.

Washington Hebrew Congregation Rabbi Joui Hessel, left, chats with Lori Cohen of Arlington. Hessel leads the 2239 Young Professionals group.

A standing-room-only crowd filled both the garden (above, left) and the atrium (above, right) with 2239 members and newcomers.

Erica Berger of the District talks with Joey Barr, also of the District, back to camera, and Mike Gereboff of Arlington.

Elise Jarvis of Arlington, left, and Stephanie Heller of D.C. hang out with steering committee member Joey Barr, also of D.C.